Chelsea Hospital. Dormitories. The Royal Military Hospital founded by Charles II. in 1682, and built by Wren is traditionally ascribed to the good nature of Nell Gwynne. It stands on the site of "King James' Colledge at Chelsey," founded here in 1618 by Sutcliffe Dean of Exeter. The long East and West sides of the Hospital quadrangle contain the pensioners's dormitories, eight on either side, each containing twenty four partitioned and curtained cubicles with larger quarters for a sergeant at either end.
